Complete instructions and guidelines for submitting a manuscript for consideration are located at: www.press.uillinois.edu/journals/jane/submissions.html.

Information for Authors: The Journal of Animal Ethics is a journal of inquiry, argument, and exchange dedicated to exploring the moral dimension of our relations with animals. The editors are therefore interested in receiving pioneering studies that relate to human interaction with animals, but all work must have an ethical focus or clearly demonstrate relevance to ethical issues.

Submissions should fall into one of these four categories: full-length articles: normally 3,000 to 5,000 words, though longer articles will be considered; argument pieces: normally 1,000 to 2,000 words, in which an author argues for a specific point of view, replies to a previously published article or review, or offers commentary in response to a topical issue; review articles: normally 2,000 to 3,000 words, based on a published work that merits particular consideration, and book reviews normally up to 1,000 words, and which are usually commissioned, though we welcome reviews of historical or classical works that merit further consideration.

General Requirements: The Journal does not consider multiple submissions or articles that are under consideration by another journal. All submissions must be well-argued to a high level of philosophical sophistication. Authors must take care to offer well-crafted and reasoned pieces.

Technical terms must be explained and an English translation supplied for all non-English words used. The editors will not accept work that, though meritorious, is unnecessarily obtuse or verbose, or that overuses technical language. The editors will not publish material that justifies or advocates illegality or violence.

In addition to the normal policies against libelous and discriminatory language, all authors should avoid derogatory or colloquial language or nomenclature that denigrates animals (or humans by association), including such terms as “beasts,” “brutes,” “bestial,” “beastly,” “dumb animals,” and “subhumans”; additionally, “companion animals” should be used rather than “pets,” “free-living” or “free-ranging” rather than “wild,” and “carers” rather than “owners.” “He” or “she” should be utilized in relation to individual animals rather than “it.” An exception should be made in the quotation of texts, particularly historical writings.

Submissions should be formatted as Microsoft Word documents and sent as email attachments. All material submitted will be peer-reviewed in accordance with a two-stage process: (1) review by the editors and, if necessary, (2) review by editorial advisers. Our aim is to make decisions within a maximum period of 3 months.

Authors of full-length articles are required to provide a concise abstract of no more than 100 words, with key words for indexing. (See Style Guide requirements that follows.)

All authors, even of shorter pieces, are required to provide a paragraph of biography comprising (in this order) full name, institutional affiliation(s), special qualifications or honors, titles of up to three books published, areas of research, and e-mail address.

The editors will not accept material sent via postal mail. All submissions should arrive via e-mail to Professor Andrew Linzey at director@oxfordanimaethics.com.

Style Guide: Authors should prepare their manuscripts in accordance with the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association (6th edition). For questions not addressed in the APA Manual, the Chicago Manual of Style (16th edition) should be consulted. All spelling, punctuation, and word usage should conform to American English, as presented in Merriam-Webster's Collegiate Dictionary (11th edition).

Article elements should be arranged as follows: title, author, affiliation, abstract, key words, body text, acknowledgments, references, tables.

Contact information (postal address, e-mail address, and telephone) for the corresponding author should appear on the title page.

Figures should be presented in separate files at a resolution of at least 300 dpi, be rendered in gray scale, and be no less than 4 inches on a side.

Text citations should follow the form of author last name and year of publication, plus page number for quoted material (e.g., Linzey, 2009, pp. 55–56).

Books for Review: Publishers are invited to send relevant books for review to the Oxford Centre for Animal Ethics (91 Iffley Road, Oxford OX4 1EG, England, UK). All books received will be listed under the Books Received section; such listing will not imply or preclude subsequent review.

Acknowledgments: We gratefully acknowledge the following whose generosity has made the journal possible: The Marchig Trust for Animal Welfare, Barbara Riebman and the Riebman Family Foundation, Dr. Irene W. Crowe, and Susan Boggio.
